September Commentary

The Fund produced a return of +0.8% during the month compared to a return of -1.7% for the FTSE All-Share Index (TR) in what was a lacklustre month for UK equities.

Throughout the summer and early autumn, the UK equity market struggled to maintain the positive momentum seen in April and May. Negotiations around the UK's future trading relationship with Europe have loomed large and Britain's handling of the Covid-19 pandemic has not been faultless. Both factors undoubtedly create some market-specific risk but this does not wholly explain the weakness.

The performance of a market cap-weighted index is disproportionately influenced by its largest constituents. In the same way as the performance of the S&P 500 Index has been dominated, up until the end of August at least, by the stellar performance of half a dozen tech stocks, the FTSE 100 has been held back by a handful of large oil and bank names. Equally weighted, the FTSE 100 would have delivered a positive return in the third quarter, rather than a decline of -4.0%. It is for this reason that we invest unconstrained by the shape of the index.

Despite being unwilling to invest in some relatively large parts of the index, we find the UK contains more than enough excellent companies to create a focussed portfolio of good-quality, dividend growth stocks. By way of illustration, the top ten contributors to the Fund's performance over the month contained stocks such as Domino's Pizza, Intertek, Hiscox, Croda and Fever-Tree. Intertek, the largest of these stocks by market cap, makes up little more than 0.5% of the index but nearly 3% of the portfolio. We also ignore the sectoral make-up of the UK equity market when constructing portfolios. Whilst diversification is important, we are happy to invest with conviction in those sectors that we believe can generate the profile of returns we seek. The ability of the consumer staples sector to steadily compound returns, whilst shielding investors from the worst of market volatility, has meant it has long commanded a 25-30% share of the Fund's capital. Software, financial platforms and data-focussed companies are also significantly better represented in the portfolio than in the FTSE All-Share. Collectively, they represent just under a quarter of the assets and are likely to contribute meaningfully to the Fund's future dividend growth. Equally, we feel no need to expose investors to the risks of a host of sub-sectors or companies with return profiles that are incompatible with our investment philosophy, however large they may be.

By investing in this way, we construct portfolios that are materially different to the index and so can also deliver differentiated returns.
