October Commentary

Your Fund delivered a total return of +0.9% during the month compared to +1.8% for the FTSE All-Share Index (TR).

Troy has always gravitated towards companies that we think can perform well in 'all weathers', and this includes through periods of heightened inflation. It is fair to say that the market has recently appeared sceptical that some of our consumer goods companies can do this. Helpfully, over the past few weeks we have had updates from P&G, Unilever, Reckitt and Nestlé, and also from many of their peers. We offer three takeaways from these latest data points.

1) Not all consumer staples businesses are created equal. Whilst commoditised categories have been challenged, premium products are faring much better, benefitting from higher gross margins to absorb cost increases as well as superior volume growth in many cases. Nestlé's coffee and pet care businesses are good examples. Nestlé trades at close to an all-time-high share price, as does Procter & Gamble.

2) Years such as these are testing for consumer goods businesses. With 'cost of goods sold' inflation running at perhaps +10% to +15% on average, these really are extreme times. Whilst demand for Unilever's and Reckitt's products is stable, even in recessions, managing price in response to input cost inflation is always difficult, and only comes through with a time lag.

3) These companies have been here before. Whilst not finding it easy, they are managing their way through the current backdrop and are leaning on decades or even centuries of experience of doing so. We are not complacent, but we think the investment cases for these companies are far from broken and are reassured by how they are collectively faring.

Outside of consumer staples, we are seeing plenty of positive progress; other large holdings such as RELX, Paychex, Experian and Croda are currently very well placed to weather these unusual times. Resilience and appropriate diversity of company and industry exposures remain core to our process.
