November Commentary

Your Fund delivered a total return of +6.7% during the month compared to +12.7% for the FTSE All-Share Index (TR). The near-simultaneous announcements of positive efficacy data on multiple COVID-19 vaccines this month spurred an extraordinary rally in equity markets. Although your Fund rose strongly in absolute terms in response to this triumph of scientific achievement, it significantly lagged the index.

The resurgence in share prices was most potent for those companies acutely impacted by the pandemic, and those with high levels of leverage in their enterprise values. As a result, a portfolio of generally defensive companies with no, low, or reasonable levels of debt was not in favour during the month. While many names within Energy, Financial and Industrial sectors rose strongly in the index, several of the Fund's holdings in core portfolio sectors such as Consumer Staples and defensive technology-centric business models did not follow suit.

In over sixteen years of managing your Fund, we have lived through several similarly pronounced 'rotations'. We are alive to the uncomfortable shape of such periods for the competitiveness of the Fund's short-term performance. However, our strategy remains consistent: focussing on resilient business models capable of producing growing free cash flow long into the future. This year has been productive, with the addition of several such companies we think meet these criteria.

Crucially, consistency in strategy does not indicate a lack of evolution in our thinking. Change abounds in our tech-driven age, providing new tests of the resilience and right to grow for many businesses. The pandemic itself will have many lasting implications. Positively, while many of the Fund's holdings have not participated in the recent rally, in many cases we see reasons to anticipate greater relevance in a post-pandemic world. Companies such as Intertek (the global testing, inspection and certification company) may benefit from structurally higher standards on health and hygiene as well as on the resilience of supply chains. The ubiquitous theme of digitisation will be a positive force for many; as more facets of our life move online, the likes of Experian, with their data and analytics for credit checking/digital identification, Paychex, with their cloud-based HR software, or AJ Bell, with their online investment platform, all stand to benefit.

With the long-term prospects for many holdings reinforced, and with current news flow increasingly positive, we find ample reasons to be optimistic about the outlook for your Fund.
