December Commentary

The Master Fund produced a return of -2.4% during the month compared to -3.7% for the FTSE All-Share Index (TR).

The traditional festive rally that arrives, more often than not, whether in years of strong or weak stock markets was absent in 2018. In the UK the FTSE 100 index closed the end of the year at 6728, over 200 points lower than on the eve of the millennium 19 years ago. In the US, the S&P 500 lost -9% during the month – its worst December performance since 1931. Unseasonal volatility was in both directions with a fall in the US market of -2.7% on Christmas Eve, normally one of the quietest days of the year, followed by a +5% rally on Boxing Day, the best daily performance since March 2009. Markets have rallied a little into the New Year, reversing sharply oversold conditions, but they remain fragile.

Investors were spooked by two particular events in December, which were a microcosm of last year's overriding concerns – the trade war between the US and China and tighter monetary policy. The first trigger was the unexpected arrest of Huawei's Chief Financial Officer in Vancouver which threatened to derail ongoing trade talks. The second was the firm line taken by the Federal Reserve to continue on 'autopilot' to raise interest rates and shrink its balance sheet.

The Master Fund is very defensively positioned. After almost a decade, the economic and market cycles look to have turned. Amid the general market gloom there is reason for optimism. Normalisation may be painful but we would expect to shift asset allocation more positively as the year progresses, should greater value present itself.
