June Commentary

Your Fund returned +2.1% during the month compared to +3.7% for the FTSE All-Share Index (TR).

June saw the gold price rise from just over $1,300 to over $1,400. This move has taken the precious metal back to levels not seen since 2013. When viewed in sterling terms, the gold price is now a whisker away from its all-time high.

We wrote about gold in September last year, following our addition to the Fund's holding at around $1,200. Sentiment towards gold had ground lower since 2013 as expectations for higher interest rates, particularly in the US, weighed on a non-yielding asset. Fast forward nine months and $13trn of the world's debt is now offering a negative yield-to-maturity. Suddenly gold's 'yield credentials' are less problematic for investors.

Gold's primary attraction is its age-old status as a store of value. As quantitative tightening ambitions fade and talk of currency wars dominate the headlines, gold's status as a currency which central bankers cannot print is increasingly valuable. Alan Greenspan noted that, "If the dollar or any other currency would be universally accepted at all times, central banks would see no necessity to hold gold at all. The fact that they do so, shows that such currencies are not a universal replacement for gold."

Gold continues to provide a vital hedge against monetary instability, whilst offering valuable diversification in times of equity market stress.
