November Commentary

Your Fund returned +3.4% during the month compared to +5.8% for the MSCI World Index (NR) GBP.

This year the 5th of November will be remembered as the day Donald Trump was returned to the White House. As the Economist put it, we are now living in Trumpworld. The emphatic victory by the President-elect has caused some short-term reaction in global capital markets reflecting an upbeat attitude to the perceived benefits of a Trump administration, notably around deregulation and enhanced productivity in the public sector. Hence, we have seen strength in areas of the equity market such as banking, technology, Bitcoin and European defence. The US Dollar has been strong, spreads tight and equity volatility has declined. Some of our holdings, such as, Paychex, ADP and IHG have benefited from this.

At the same time less favoured areas have struggled, most obviously renewable energy and non-US currencies, including Sterling, but most impactfully, perhaps, the US Treasury market. The yield on the US 2-year note has climbed from a recent low of 3.54% to 4.15% as at 30th November, similarly the US 10 year yield has moved from 3.64% to a recent high of 4.45% as the bond market correctly anticipated a Trump win and the likelihood of greater inflation. The enactment of unfunded tax cuts, stricter treatment of migrants constraining the labour supply, and especially the imposition of tariffs will all contribute to this risk. When this is combined with a greater questioning of the independence of the US Federal Reserve, a more balanced view than is implied by recent excitement may be wise.

Much is uncertain, as rhetoric may not predict policy outcomes. However, to us it seems that markets have been quick to price in the positive attributes of the Trump agenda while potentially ignoring the negatives. There is an irony here that one of the key negatives (potential tariffs) are relatively easy to enact whereas the more positive policies or deregulation and raising productivity will likely be much slower and more difficult to achieve.

We stand ready to take advantage of opportunities that arise should markets strike a more cautious tone.
