January Commentary

Your Fund returned +2.8% during the month compared to +5.5% for the FTSE All-Share Index (TR).

Equity markets posted strong returns in January and several indices, including the FTSE All-Share and MSCI World, reached new all-time highs. Such ebullient markets mask volatility in both the technology and political world.

Donald Trump's inauguration on the 20th of January triggered a volley of 45 executive orders in the first 12 days alone. The topics covered by these orders include withdrawing the US from the World Health Organisation and the Paris Agreement on climate change, delaying the ban on TikTok, and declaring a national emergency to deploy the military on the southern border. Trump's stance on the border toughened at the end of the month through the imposition of 25% tariffs on most imports from Canada and Mexico, as well as 10% on Chinese imports. The tariffs cover around 40% of the US's trade and are likely to attract retaliatory action from targeted countries. We expect much of the cost of these tariffs to be borne by consumers and think they drive upside risk to inflation as prices rise to reflect the elevated cost of imported goods. Perhaps the more significant lesson from the first two weeks of the 47th Presidency is that we are in a more volatile period where established partnerships and trading relationships are subject to rapid change.

Western businesses focused on artificial intelligence (AI) were also rocked last month by the launch of DeepSeek's R1 model. The new reasoning model offers similar performance to the leading AI tools at a fraction of the cost (both to develop and to use). Our latest investment report explains how our preference for owning the cloud infrastructure providers avoids reliance on a single model being the 'winner'. Both Microsoft and Alphabet should benefit from AI but are not reliant on it for their business to be successful.

The future path of the economy, inflation and monetary policy all appear more fragile. With this backdrop of uncertainty, it is perhaps no surprise that gold reached new highs. We continue to have a significant holding in physical bullion, in the expectation it will protect the Fund should the environment deteriorate.
